Energy, savings, conservation

With increased foreclosure situations and gas prices on the rise, now more than ever, clients need to be concerned about saving money. This poster highlights strategies clients can use to conserve household energy; therefore, conserving household energy costs. The main topics covered are: limiting air-infiltration, weatherizing your home, adding insulation, having the electric company do an energy audit, installing low-flow shower heads, insulating hot water heaters, and using appliances more efficiently (full loads, etc.) Not only will these conservation methods show clients how to save money, but they will also teach them how to make their homes run more efficiently and be more comfortable.
